with Petra Heinz, Sylwia Bukowska, Chi Zhang, Elisabeth Aufhauser, and Christine Ackerl

“When you asked somebody to draw a scientist, it used to be all men”: The documentary “Picture a Scientist” critically analyses the many faces of “male culture” in North American (natural) sciences, persisting problems and positive developments, and discusses possible solutions.

- How do the problems depicted in this documentary relate to the situation at our Faculty? Which problems do female scientists and members of minorities face at FGGA?
- How to address these problems on different scales? Which solutions have already been implemented successfully? What did not work out?
- Which alternative ways could you imagine? What are the major difficulties to be encountered?
